ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method includes receiving fault classification data associated with a fault condition and estimating at least one yield parameter based on the fault classification data. A system includes a fault classification unit and a yield estimation unit. The fault classification unit is adapted to generate fault classification data associated with a fault condition, and the yield estimation unit is adapted to estimate at least one yield parameter based on the fault classification data.